To Benefit the ICSC Educational Foundation
Bellagio Hotel & Casino

As ICSC celebrates its 50th anniversary, we can't help but indulge in a bit of nostalgia. In the past five decades we've grown from a seven-person organization to the world's largest retail real estate association with 65,000 members in more than 80 countries. Along the way we've established many milestones, made many friends and created lots of fond memories. Come celebrate 50 years of shopping center professionalism on Sunday, May 20 at 6:30 pm. Proceeds to benefit the ICSC Educational Foundation. Established in 1988 the Educational Foundation is the non-profit public foundation of the ICSC. The mission of the Educational Foundation is to promote the study of and scholarly research involving retail real estate, and retail related disciplines. ICSC's Educational Foundation is one of the most important single sources of financial support for programs, institutions, centers and scholars in a wide range of academic pursuits to advance the understanding of shopping centers and their role in the economic, cultural and social life of today's world.

The evening will also host a silent auction.
Seating is limited for this event.

Ray Romano

Ray Romano admits that he always knew he could make his friends laugh, but he never really gave stand-up comedy any serious thought until one fateful open-mic night at a New York comedy club in 1984. He did well, he bug bit hard, and Romano was smitten. After stints at odd jobs, including futon mattress delivery boy and bank teller by day, and journeyman comedian by night, he decided to leave the 9-5 ranks and pursue comedy full-time, eventually winning a stand-up comedy competition sponsored by a major New York radio station that same year.

Following that success, he continued to regularly appear at comedy clubs throughout the country, leading to appearances on "The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson" and then with Jay Leno. He was eventually invited to appear on "Late Night with David Letterman." That night, Letterman, recognizing something very unique in Romano's persona, offered him a development deal with his production company, Worldwide Pants. Through that association, the CBS hit, "Everybody Loves Raymond" was born.

Ray has not only gone on to star in his own television series, but to perform at the White House Correspondents Dinner for President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, and headline the Toyota Comedy Festival at Carnegie Hall. Among his numerous television appearances, he has hosted "Saturday Night Live," and appeared on "Who Wants To Be A Millionaire," winning $125,000 for charity. Romano's additional television credits include, "HBO Comedy Half-Hour: Ray Romano," "The HBO 15th Annual Young Comedians Special" and "Dr. Katz: Professional Therapist." Ray recently made his big screen debut as the voice of "Manny" the wholly mammoth, in the 20th Century Fox smash hit, "Ice Age." Ray also stars in the features "Eulogy," and "Welcome To Mooseport," with Gene Hackman.

After being nominated in 1999, 2000, and 2001, Romano won an Emmy Award for Outstanding Lead Actor in a Comedy Series in 2002. Ray has also been nominated for a Golden Globe for Best Performance by an Actor in a Comedy Series (2000 and 2001), a Screen Actor's Guild Award for Outstanding Performance by a Male Actor in a Comedy Series (2000), a People's Choice Award for Favorite Male TV Performer (2000, 2001, 2003), and an AFI Actor of the Year Award for Male in a Series (2002). "Everybody Loves Raymond" won an Emmy Award in 2003 for Outstanding Comedy Series. Ray is also the author of the New York Times best-selling book based on his comedy, "Everything And A Kite." He has also written a children's book along with his brothers, Richard and Robert, entitled, "Raymie, Dickie, and the Bean: Why I Love and Hate My Brothers," released in March 2005.

He lives in Los Angeles with his wife and four children.
