Restaurants:

Cafe Milano $ 125

Since owner Franco Nuschese blazed onto the D.C. dining scene twenty years ago, Cafe Milano has been a power center for diplomats, politicians, journalists, broadcasters, lobbyists, entertainers, and all who enjoy fine Italian food and gracious attentive service.

Guests savor genuine Southern Coastal Italian cuisine in a setting reminiscent of a stylish Milan boutique. Framed designer scarves adorn the walls in a creative and colorful homage to Italian fashion.

Charlie Palmer Steak $ 120

Charlie Palmer Steak, located in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters building, is dedicated to another fine master craft: big, bold American food. Under the direction of Executive Chef Jeffery Russell, a Culinary Institute of America graduate whose interest in agriculture and aquaculture is rooted in his early years living in the Finger Lakes Region of upstate New York, the menu not only stars the best American artisan beef but updated locally sourced seafood combinations.

DC Coast $ 120

An acclaimed Washington landmark since it burst on to the scene fifteen years ago, DC Coast was conceived as a chic, comfortable atmosphere in which impeccable service meets first-class cuisine. Its cavernous space within the stunning Art Deco Tower Building anchoring the bustling K Street corridor is the sleek setting for chef Jeff Tunks' menu, inspired by America's coastal regions: mid-Atlantic, Gulf Coast, and West Coast/Pacific Rim.

Fiola $ 135

Fiola is Chef Fabio Trabocchi's first owned restaurant located in the heart of D.C.'s Penn Quarter. Fiola is a modern upscale trattoria and uses the freshest ingredients for its daily changing lunch and dinner menus. Fiola's wine list is extensive and great variety is used to compile wines from Italy, Spain, France and the United States.
