Shaping Retail Experience in Singapore

Shopping is a favourite pastime in many cities. The presence of lively retail centres enhance the sense of place and community, and is also an important component of liveable and loveable cities.

This has enabled Singapore's continued high ranking on global surveys that rank cities in terms of liveability. Come hear from the Urban Redevelopment Authority's Group Director for Conservation & Urban Design about how retail spaces are planned in Singapore, as well as how urban design and planning strategies have evolved for a key lifestyle destination, Orchard Road – the retail heart of Singapore.

Retail + Gaming: A Win-Win

Economic doctrine tells us that "all resources are finite" including consumer disposable income. In the pursuit of increasingly sophisticated consumers, it might be reasonable to assume that the co-existence of retail and gaming facilities would mean that the success of one comes at the detriment of the other. Yet in Asia-Pacific, integrated resorts where these two activities profitably co-exist are thriving. The leaders of the resort industry share some of the secrets of their success.

How to Assess the Value of Place

The abundance of shopping centres has created highly-competitive retail markets. As a way of differentiating their projects, property owners, developers and operators have moved towards the concept of "placemaking." While the successful design and development of "places" can enhance the quality of urban life, quantifying the value of "place" is a complex process. For example, how to justify the investment in a water feature? And what is the return-on-investment of providing green spaces? Plus, how can we ensure that the "placemaking" elements of today will be relevant ten years from now? In this session, a leader in the design and development of "places," together with a leader in the cost/benefit analysis of investments in "placemaking," will discuss the keys to success for this kind of retail real estate development, the process of calculating the value of "placemaking" and the likely direction of their continued evolution.

The Future of Retail

The robust development of the retail real estate industry in Asia-Pacific continues despite clear changes in consumption behaviors both in terms of what people want and how they prefer to acquire it. At the same time, the allocation of floor space to traditional retail stores continues to decrease with the entry of new tenants offering experience, entertainment, health and wellness and a wide range of services. Have we officially entered a post-shopping centre world? The region's leading developers and operators share their views on where we are as an industry and, more importantly, what lies in (and out of) store(s) in the coming years.

Emerging Markets

The traditional big box-and strata -titled dominant properties in markets like Vietnam, Cambodia and Myanmar are quickly falling out of favour. And the new generations in these markets are not seeking the kinds of centres seen in the more established markets 5 or 10 years ago. They want the same experiences as their peers around the region, indeed around the world -- more and better F&B, a wider variety of entertainment and tech-friendly environments. At the same time, developers are playing an essential role in creating new neighbourhoods and communities which are enhanced by engaging consumption centres. An expert panel will share insights into the leading players in these markets. They will identify opportunities and will cite lessons to be learned from the newest markets in Asia-Pacific.

SINGAPORE

Some refer to her as the “little red dot”, but Singapore’s presence in the world today is larger than that moniker. Although small in size, Singapore commands an enormous presence in the world today with its free trade economy and highly efficient workforce. In fact, Singapore is a bustling cosmopolitan city that offers a world-class living environment, with her landscape populated by high-rise buildings and gardens.

One interesting facet you will discover about Singapore is a ubiquitous collage of cultures, where people of different ethnicities and beliefs coexist. Brimming with a harmonious blend of culture, cuisine, arts and architecture, Singapore is a dynamic city that is rich in contrast and colour. In fact, you can even say that Singapore embodies the finest of both East and West.

If you prefer the bright city lights and being amidst the hustle and bustle, then you’ll be delighted to know that there are numerous shopping malls, museums, and dining and entertainment hotspots to choose from. Get into the thick of the shopping action at the iconic Orchard Road stretch, or party the night away at the Clarke Quay or Boat Quay areas, both of which offer a myriad selection of nightlife activities.

Beyond the history, culture, people, shopping and food, there are many more facets to Singapore’s thriving cityscape for you to discover. And these can only be experienced as you immerse yourself in the exploration of this once fishing village turned cosmopolitan city.
